We have celebrated St. Patrick once again with an especially delicious dinner and dessert. Thanks to all of you who came to celebrate with us. Thanks too for those who did all the work. At one point it seemed as though the men, Richard Angelini and Richard Monteiro, were the main chefs (and that may be the truth) but their wives Paulette and Debbie, and the Monteiro daughters Arianne and Allyson, were very much part of the effort as well. Then there were those who bought and prepared the food (Jackie Hill prepared the onions) and those who set up the tables and served the dinner. Nor can we forget Leo Shiel who helped in the kitchen and once again made sure that our Irish dancers appeared. Many, many thanks to all of you.

We have a new pope. May God bless him in his new position! As Bishop Tobin said, it is spring in the church because there are so many new beginnings at this moment: the first pope from America, the first Jesuit pope, and the first pope to take the name Francis in honor of Francis of Assisi. It seems that the Pope chose this name because he sees Francis of Assisi as one who embodied in his life a simple life-style, a care for the poor and a care for nature. Thus we can hope that Pope Francis will embody these same values in his pontificate. We, of course, should follow his example by embodying these same values and virtues in our own lives.

THE GOSPEL

Luke 22:14 - 23:56 or 23:1-49

"Into your hands, Father, I commend my spirit."

Christ,
we have seen
how much you love us,
setting your face like flint toward Jerusalem,
giving your body up to the whips,
your face to the slaps.

With your last breath you showed us how to live.

"into your hands, Father, I commend my spirit."

Help us be truly present at your cross all our days.

REFLECTION ON THIS WEEKEND'S READINGS WHAT KIND OF KING?

In history there were two kinds of kings. One kind enjoyed power, wealth, pride and especially war, leaving little room for the people's welfare. At the other end of the spectrum was a king or queen who had empathetic care for each person, for the well-being of the populace.

Early on, King Arthur of England was slated to be the good kind of ruler, not the power monger. As you may know, Merlin the magician* had actually kidnapped the baby Arthur from his father's great castle and had taken him far away to a bedraggled court, a place where Merlin could train him to know the small and modest beings of the world around him.

The rest of that story remains for another day, but it is interesting to note that nearly the same thing happened to Jesus. He wasn't kidnapped of course, but he was brought up in quite unpretentious circumstances, and he loved the small and beautiful parts of his dusty childhood.

Startling fact: this Sunday Jesus enters Jerusalem in a proud and kingly manner! He receives the pomp and glory of power. Has he changed into the bad kind of king?

The liturgy shows the answer, but we need some history first. The custom in Jesus' day was for royalty to ride a colt, or as it is often translated, donkey. This was not supposed to be a sign of humility but of royal status. To honor the kingly person, people lined up on the sides of the roadway, strewing the tall palm fronds they had picked, and also their own cloaks, onto the roadway, to shield the King from the dirty road.

Jesus did not shy away from these mighty honors; in fact he caused them to happen. He sent disciples to get the colt. He chose to ride it. He entered Jerusalem as a Savior King. The Palm branches distributed to us on Palm/Passion Sunday are a reminder of this.

Jesus had always been very wary of this kind of treatment. He had warned the disciples not to tell anyone about the miracles he was doing, so that he would not become a celebrity. So, why the exception in this case?

Look at the liturgy. We have a special opening procession in Sunday's Mass to act out the above story. But very soon we hear, not homage, but horrors, in Christ's Passion from the Gospel of Luke. Suddenly this honored, great king is betrayed. Peter the Rock, who promised never to deny him, does exactly that, three times. Jesus says out loud that he, Jesus, must be "counted among the wicked" (Luke 22:37, quoting Isaiah 53:12).

He sweats blood in the garden and then gives himself over into the devil's hands, saying, in effect, "This is your hour, time for your darkness." A mock trial follows, and the alleged king joins simple thieves in a bloody death. Those strewn palms had been a mistake. There was no king here after all.

Or was there? All leadership has service at its root. The reason for kingship is not dominance, riches, honor or power. These are siren calls to entice the leader into betrayal. Kingship and all leadership exist in order to secure the welfare of the kingdom and especially the welfare of those who are in it.

Jesus came to bring this kind of kingdom, one of service and humility, not of pride and competition. The way of the cross was the greatest fulfillment of his kingship, as opposed to cheering and accolades.

A new kind of king.

Fr. John Foley, S. J.
